

BMB Undergraduate Research Awards and Scholarships

DEADLINE TO APPLY: OCTOBER 20, 2017

IMPORTANT: Recipients of these awards will be notified by the end of the fall semester, so that award information can be included in graduate school/job/professional school applications. Award funds will be disbursed in spring semester, and the awards will be presented and celebrated at the annual Biochemistry Department Banquet to be held in April. Please plan to attend this event if you are applying for any of these awards.

1. Pamela J. Fraker Undergraduate Scholarship ($2000)

One or more scholarships of $2000 will be awarded to an undergraduate who has attained at least sophomore status as of the semester in which the application is submitted, carries at least a 3.0 grade point average at the time of application, and has a demonstrated financial need. The scholarship will be applied to the awardee's spring tuition. This award is intended to encourage students who have demonstrated the capacity and motivation to achieve educational and professional goals and the initiative to seek opportunities to further their progress.

Eligibility

- Strong academic performance; a minimum 3.0 grade point average at the time of application
- Sophomore or higher level undergraduate status
- Financial need (the applicant/nominee must explicitly address financial need in their personal statement)

2. Professor Richard L. Anderson Endowed Undergraduate Research Prize ($2000)

This prize is for BMB majors who will have attained at least junior status by this current Fall semester and who are committed to pursuing a career in research. The prize will be applied to the awardees' spring tuition. Applicants should be currently working in a lab or plan to do so the coming academic year and the application must contain a letter of support from a faculty mentor indicating their willingness to host the student for research in their laboratory the coming year.

*Requirements and eligibility are listed below.

3. Dr. James K. Billman, Jr. Undergraduate Research Awards ($1,500)

Up to two $1,500 awards will be given. The Billman award is intended for BMB majors who have attained at least junior status by this current Fall semester and would like to do undergraduate research, but cannot because of the need to work. The award will be applied to the awardees' spring tuition. Applicants should be currently working in a lab or plan to do so the coming academic year and the application must contain a letter of support from a faculty mentor indicating their willingness to host the student for research in their laboratory the coming year. *Requirements and eligibility are listed below.

4. BMB Undergraduate Research Fellowships ($1,500)

Up to two $1,500 fellowships will be given. The Fellowships are for both BMB and Non-BMB majors working in a Biochemistry Department lab who have attained at least junior status by this current Fall semester and would like to do undergraduate research, but cannot because of the need to work. The award will be applied to the awardees' spring tuition. Applicants should be currently working in a lab or plan to do so the coming academic year and the application must contain a letter of support from a faculty mentor indicating their willingness to host the student for research in their laboratory the coming year. *Requirements and eligibility are listed below.

Eligibility for numbers 2, 3 & 4 listed above:

- Plan to pursue a career in research (NOTE: Students not planning to pursue a career in research may still be considered for the Billman Award and Research Fellowships)
- Strong academic performance; a minimum 3.0 grade point average at the time of application
- Professorial Assistants and Alumni Distinguished Scholars are not eligible for these awards because they already have a source of research support
- Must be enrolled as an undergraduate in spring semester to receive the financial support
- Applications from previous BMB award recipients are unlikely to be funded

NOTE: Application and instructions for applying found on page 2
